Mr. Drew complained that he had borrowed two thousand shares of the stock, and that the defendant and others had conspired to make a comet in the market, causing an unnatural rise in the price and greatly damaging parties in his position. The case is not yet decided.

Thomas should be compelled to stand back to wait and feel for a time the disabilities of treason. No consideration of policy or desire to exercise magnanimity, no mesmeric charm of expediency could hide the overwhelming fact that the admission of such men into the councils of the nation would be a crime more damnable than treason itself. There should be no system of reconstruction that was not of the protection and security of Union men in the South and of the colored freedmen. The latter should have the ballot which contained a modified power of protection, and this would be only a return to the old practise of the country, for at the time of the revolution it was only in two States, Georgia and South Carolina, that the colored freedmen were refused suffrage. The activity in hardware, noticed at the the date of our last review, has somewhat subskited, and the volume of business is not so large as the previous week. The west is certainly short of goods, but buyers after supplying themselves liberally during the past ten days, are now holding off to some extent, in hopes of a decline in prices. This, however, is not likely to take place before June or July, owing to the combinations among manufacturers to keep up quotations, until the present stock of war material, bought at hish prices is exhausted. WHEELER & WILSON CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

The House set as if in committee on the whole on the state of the Union, the only business in order being general debate on the President's annual mes-Mr. Hogan, of Mo., addressed the House. He characterized this session as the session of magazine articles prepared and spoken by members and published in the Globe to such an extent that that publication exceeded by 32,400 pages the quantity published in the corresponding period of the first session of the last Congress? What beneficial purposes had all these essays contributed, with the exception of five or six, or perhaps a dozen of them, there was not a solitary new idea presented by them. They were but a mere repretition of what had been said by others. The verbiage had been changed, but the ideas were the same. These speeches might be almost regarded as law, for they had their first, second and third readings. The principal topic of these speeches was the American citizen of African descent. He believed there was a great deal of mistaken philanthropy and sympathy exhibited for the colored people. When they were in slavery, he proceeded to show from personal experience, that the slaves of the South had not had a very bad time of it. [This part of his speech brought out a series of questioning from Messrs. Price, Plants and Morris.] Mr. Hogan's answers showed that he believed slavery to be wrong; that he was glad that it was extirpiated; the the believed that the Democratic party could not die while liberry lived and that all declarations about the negro was a great wrong perpetraeted in Congress and the American po-Mr. Hogan, of Mo., addressed the lived and that all declarations about the negro was a great wrong perpetrated in Congress and the American people passing on the discussion of the reconstruction question.

Mr. Hogan proceeded to show the inconsistency of the present policy of the Republican party with the action of Congress throughout the war, &c., in the admission to a sent on the floor, of persons claiming to be representatives from Tennessee and Louisiana, and in other matters of general legislation.—Much of the argument at this session had been against the President of the United States. He had been denounced and abused because his policy was sutained by democrats in the House. But had he been nominated and elected behad he been nominated and elected be cause he was a democrat and because

Mr. Baldwin, of Mass, was the next speaker. He had no sympathy, he said, with the eager zeal which had been exhibited for restoring the insurgent States to their place in the Union. He thought the effort premature. It seemed to him the work should have been undertaken without haste, and with very great deliberation. He thought is better to have waited until the mad passions had subsided, till the whole lastion bud been made to feel that treevery great deliberation. He thought it better to have waited until the mad passions had subsided, till the whole nation had been made to feel that treason is a erime, till the policy to be pursued with traitors had been settled, until time had developed in those Southern communities with elements of reconstruction as would have made it successful, and until that black and bloody spirit, baffled treason, had been changed and purified by the transfiguration of such a returning love for the old flag and for the power and glory of the Republic as would have brought all the semblance of genuine loyalty. He cordially approved of the joint resolution reported from the Reconstruction Committee relating to traitors, so far as it asserted or implied the absolute authority of Congress over questions of that character, but the resolution was not quite free from objection in another aspect; it had not been presented in the best form. He thought it could be much improved by making it more direct. A portion of its language was calculated to mislead many people. He meant the portion resolving that the State of Tennessee is hereby declared to be one of the United States of America on an equal footing with other States. That language was understood by many to mean that Tennessee was now out of the United States of America on an equal footing with other States. That language was understood by many to mean that Tennessee was now out of the Union. He was sure no such meaning was intended, but the language was likely to lead to misconstruction, and should not be used in a resolution of such importance. He thought the resolution might be limproved by declared to be satisfactorily reorganized and in it condition to reventible berold relations to the Gov.

Resolved, that has the be satisfactorily reorganized and in fit condition to restablish her old relations to the Government, and resume her representaernment, and resume her representation in Congress.

He held that not an acre of land in the Southern region had ceased for a moment to be under the national sovereignty. No assumption or proceeding of treason had repealed the act of Congress by which certain specified Territory was declared to be the State of Tennessee. Either the most pestilent doctrine of secession, or else every ordinance of secession must be inflexibly ance of secession must be inhealing reated as null and void from the be-inning. The men who had conspired and warred against the Government, and who were still unchanged in spirit, under the previous question, would be a disgrace to the House. Intend to move the previous question, and if the House is all support me, we shall take a vote immediately on the reading of the veto. If that will be a disgrace to the House, the House will take the disgrace upon itself.

Mr. Le Blond next addressed the House, applying himself to the disapproval of the argument that the insurgent States were out of the Union. He said that at all times during the war it had been the declared policy of the Government that the war was not waged for the purpose of conquest or subjection, but for the purpose of the Talous and took in from depositors $40, -900. ernment that the war was not waged for the purpose of conquest or subjection, but for the maintainance of the Union.

Mr. Clark, of Kansas, next addressed the House on the question of reconstruction. He held that the rebellious States were out of the Union so far as any right on their part was concerned.

Mr. Bingham was the next speaker. He declared himself unable to agree with the Committee on Reconstruction, and to the policy and expediency of passing the joint resolution for the admission of Tennessee. He did not think Tennessee was in a condition to exercise the functions of State within the Union. $50,000 and took in from depositors $40,000. He received $10,000 in currency from New York this morning. Mr. Kasses has resumed business, the assistance tendered him having enabled him to go on as before and to meet all demands which he now proposes to do. The assignees of Ward & Bro., are preparing to pay a per centage to depositors, and will continue to do so till all the effects are disposed of. They hope to pay nearly, if not quite the full amount down.

The Speaker presented a communica-tion from the Secretary of War in reply to the resolution of the House of the 2nd inst., in reference to officers em-ployed in the quartermasters depart-ment in Washington, and also giving information respecting the Corcoran Art Building, laid on the table. At half pasi four the House adjourned.

New York, April 7.—Judge McCann has granted an injunction against Geo. Scott and others in the petition of Da-vid Drew, restraining them from buy-ing-in two thousand shares of the Michgan Southern & Northern Indiana tailroad stock, valued at about $200,-

The special commission for the trial of prisoners charged with offences durose its labor in a few days.

The matter will be investigated by the United States authorities.

The ship yards of Green point are still deserted, the men refusing towork ten hours, and the bosses refusing to adopt the eight hour system.

The Tribune states that after the injunction obtained by Mr. Drew against Scott, Capron & Co. was served yesterday, and the stock purchased for them by Messrs. Groesbeck & Co., the latter were enjoined from paying Scott, Capron & Co. the difference due them on the stock, about $20,000. The injunction was disobeyed, and the money paid by Messrs. Groesbeck & Co., and there the matter for the moment rests. The Money, East and West.

At New York cill loans with Governments for coliaterals are easily made at 5 per cent, and at Boston 6 per cent is the ruling rate. At Oncago and Cincinnati there is an ample supply of money for all legitlmate business pur passes at 10 per cent. There is no active demand for money anywhere, and though there is no general stegnation of business, there is far less doing, both in enlargement of old enterprises and the dominencement of new ones, than there would have been if Congress had acted promptly, decisively and wisely in establishing a mancian policy. The loan bill, whice has passed the House of Representatives, has not yet been acted upon it the Senate. The probability is that if the Senator ever get ready to act would be well new will be a favorably. The effect of the proposed loan bill upon the gold market seems to have been discounted in aurance, and for a week past the price has ranged from 127 to 128. There is little probability of any further advance in the premium. Money, East and West.
